The Wellness, Alcohol & Violence Education Program (WAVE) is a harm reduction program which educates the campus community on issues of personal safety and well-being. WAVE's Peer Educators provide fellow students with information and strategies regarding both alcohol use and the prevention of sexual assault and other forms of interpersonal violence. We create bridges between campus entities to develop a dynamic, comprehensive plan to create and support safe environments on the NMSU campus. WAVE provides services and supports to students regardless of sex, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation age, disability, religion or national origin.

What is WAVE?

The Wellness, Alcohol and Violence Education (WAVE) program was created at NMSU to provide students with information and skills necessary to make responsible decisions about their personal health, safety, and well being. WAVE is a peer education program that offers several services to the NMSU community that include:

- FREE HIV/AIDS testing every Wednesday in the San Juan room in Corbett Center.
- Informative presentations tailored to the needs of your group.
- Community events such as Take Back the Night, tailgating, and The White Ribbon Campaign.
- Tabling as outreach to students and a way to provide the campus community with valuable resources.
- eChug and eToke are a free, confidential way to get feedback about personal alcohol and marijuana use.

Specialized Presentations

WAVE specializes in harm reduction and violence prevention. We also provide presentations on specific topics.
